Scholarly Communication Events from
Kennesaw State University Library System

All Things Open is a series of events hosted by Kennesaw State University's Library System. They center scholarly communication as it relates to higher education, research, and global affairs and strive to provide varied and useful programming to support all levels of interest and knowledge. Proposals for open access presentations are welcome year-round and will be considered for the next event, Open Access Week 2023 in October.

Join us October 23-26 for Open Access Week 2023.

Congratulations to Valdosta State University for winning a CATALYST AWARD from Lyrasis! The award will go toward VSU's Community Archives, Digitization, Access, and Preservation project, which will address digital access to the collections of rural, under-served, and under-represented areas of South Georgia.

FEATURED COLLECTION:

ASU YEARBOOK COLLECTION

This image is from the 1964 yearbook. It shows the Margaret Rood Hazard Library. This building was destroyed during the Flood of 1994 and eventually demolished.

The Albany State University Ram Scholar's mission is to preserve, manage and access the ASU's digital scholarship, research, and history of the institution. One of the many collections in the Ram Scholar is the ASU Yearbook Collection. This collection contains electronic file copies of over twenty Albany State University yearbooks that have been shared with the library. The oldest yearbook in this collection is from 1949.
